Mother of Soldier Applauds Whitman's Rebuke To Darcy

The Australian newspapers, con cerned with war and ministerial crises, did not devote much space orises, did not devote much apace to the rebuke of Governor Whitman to Les Darcy, in which the governor, after calling Darcy a "elacker," refused to permit him to fight Jack Dillon. There was, however, this bit in the Sydney Sun, which followed the telegraphic despatches, which probably indicates the general attitude of the Australian public:

""A Soldier's Mother" writes to public:

"A Soldier's Mother" writes to appreciate "the manly action of Governor Whitman in preventing Darcy from fighting in New York," and asks, "What would be the best means to convey expressions of our gratitude to the Governor? There are thousands of soldiers' mothers in New South Wales who would like to give him a cheer."
